A1307 claims another life

Mum, 48, dies after her car overturns

A WOMAN has died after her car overturned on the A1307 last Wednesday evening (August 30).

Emergency services were called to the road between Linton and Horseheath at about 6.35pm following reports a silver Hyundai Coupe had gone into a ditch.

The driver of the vehicle, Aya Hamdi, formally known as Tina Rowsell, 48, of Edgecombe, Cambridge, was taken to Addenbrooke's Hospital, but died on Friday.

CRIME

Police protect dozens of children online

RACHAEL MC MENEMY

 @rach_mc94CN

DOZENS of children have been protected as part of an ongoing police operation targeting online child abuse imagery.

Safeguarding procedures were put in place for more than 60 children and 200 arrests were made as part of the joint operation by Norfolk and Suffolk police to tackle paedophiles operating online.

The operation was launched in 2014.

One of the successful convictions involved a Suffolk man jailed for 12 years in 2015 after raping a girl. He was arrested following information that showed indecent images of children were being downloaded at his address in Suffolk.

Detective Superintendent Steve Mattin, of the Norfolk and Suffolk Joint Cyber and Serious Crime Unit, said: "Police services across the UK are dealing with an unprecedented volume of child sexual abuse reports, including online indecent images, and these numbers continue to rise."

"Indecent images of children can only be created if a child is subject to sexual abuse. Often offenders convince themselves that as the images already exist there isn't a victim as they don't have direct contact with the children or young people involved. But these children were abused and exploited to make these images and are further victimised every time those images are viewed."

Suffolk Police and Crime Commissioner Tim Passmore said: "I find it desperately sad that children in our county are exploited in this terrible, terrible way, it is beyond my comprehension."

"I fully support the Constabulary's proactive approach to this ghastly crime, and am really pleased to see that our investment in the cyber-crime unit has played its part in safeguarding these young victims."

"The pattern of crime is changing in Suffolk, and one of the biggest changes is the huge increase of cyber and cyber-enabled crime. This growing technological menace is a scourge in our society, so I was delighted to support this extra investment in a dedicated cyber-crime unit for the county, which I understand is one of the best in the country. The unit, which is based in Halesworth, was set up to combat the rising number of cyber-crimes and is responsible for investigating all offences where networked computers or technology have been used to commit crimes and this includes child pornography."

Operation Bane runs alongside Operation NetSafe, a national campaign that teamed up with a child protection charity earlier this year to further tackle online child sexual abuse images.

Operation NetSafe looks to prevent online child abuse through public awareness of the Stop It Now! UK website and free confidential helpline run by the charity, The Lucy Faithfull Foundation.

Both encourage abusers and potential abusers to seek help by giving adults the information they need to protect children safely. They can also be used by family members and friends of offenders who are concerned about their behaviour.

HEALTH

Heartache of dementia at the age of 31

ANNA SAVVA

@AnnaSavvaCN

WHEN Becky Barletta was diagnosed with a rare form of dementia aged just 31, her family couldn't have anticipated her decline would be so rapid.

Described by her sister, Sophie, as a charismatic "blonde bombshell", the newly-wed ski instructor from Suffolk lit up the room wherever she went.

Just one year later, she now requires round-the-clock care as her condition – known as frontotemporal dementia – has altered her personality beyond all recognition.

Sophie Gilbert, 30, who has organised a charity walk for the Alzheimer's Society to raise research funds and awareness of her sister's condition, spoke to the News to share her family's heartbreak.

She said: "I was always so proud of her, so proud to say: 'My sister is a ski instructor'. I wasn't jealous of her, but she was like 'the blonde bombshell' compared to me."

"She was such a good ski instructor and especially with children – all her clients loved her."

Sophie lives with her husband and two young children next door to her parents' home in Houndsdon, where Becky receives round-the-clock care.

The deterioration of her sister's personality has been rapid, as the hereditary condition takes hold of her brain's frontal lobe, the area responsible for social intelligence and behaviour.

She said: "They say the younger the patient the more rapid it can be, and it has been very rapid. There is not much of our old Becky left. She repeats the same stories to us and says inappropriate things."

"I find it hard when we go out, she is off down the street asking people if they can make a funny noise and that sort of thing."

"It is not because I am embarrassed, but because I find it so sad to watch. Some people are amazing and do the noises and chat with her, but then there and some who do not understand, because she looks well from the outside, and can be quite short with her."

Becky was diagnosed last August 24, by the same doctor at Addenbrooke's who diagnosed her uncle, James, with the condition. James died in his 50s as a result of the disease.

Becky and Sophie's mother's cousin, Philippa, also died from the disease in her 40s. Sophie says her sister's diagnosis was the youngest case the specialist had ever seen.

But it was not an easy route getting Becky to go for a medical assessment, and the family were hoping against hope that it was something else, perhaps the stress of her forthcoming wedding.

The symptoms came in the months leading up to Becky's wedding.

Sophie recalls: "She began an obsessive running regime because she obviously wanted to look her best, but her colleagues noticed changes too."

"She was displaying inappropriate behaviour with clients on the slopes and not looking after them as well as she had previously."

Despite her family and friend's concerns Becky lacked awareness of her condition, and refused to go a medical assessment.

It was only after her sister pleaded with her and said she would do the tests as well to check for the hereditary condition that she relented.

HAPPIER TIMES: Becky with her husband Luca, a fellow ski instructor whom she met in Switzerland

But despite tests, there is no faulty gene yet discovered which the family carry that explains why some of them develop the condition.

"She had brain scans and written tests. So they said spell the word 'world' backwards and things like that, and I did it at the same time.

"It's been a year now. The situation is so hopeless, but we want to try to dredge something remotely positive out of it."

Added to her worry about her sister, Sophie has to deal with the terrifying possibility that she may also develop the disease.

"We just want a cure so our family and other families don't have to go through it – whether it is your sister at 31 or your grandma at 90, either way. A lot of people think it is an inevitable part of aging and it isn't – it's a disease."

It is unlikely Becky will live beyond 10 more years. It will be a rapid deterioration, as the disease progresses she will find it hard to swallow and eventually stop being able to communicate as her body slowly shuts down.

"I can't imagine how hard it is for her husband, Luca, because they only got married in October 2015," says Sophie.

"Being a mum is all she ever wanted, and she still says now: 'Three is the magic number,' because she always wanted three children. She always wanted children but they didn't get round to it before everything happened."

"It is outwith the realms of our normality and it is so hopeless and awful that I think if I did try to rationalise it we couldn't cope."

The family are just trying to keep going, says Sophie. And they are holding a walk with friends later next month to raise funds for the Alzheimer's Society's research into the condition.

Katie Blackburn, Alzheimer's Society spokeswoman for the East of England, said: "Frontotemporal dementia causes damage to parts of the brain which are responsible for our behaviour, our emotional responses and our language skills. This type of dementia is less common than other forms such as Alzheimer's disease and predominantly affects younger people."

"The Alzheimer's Society is here for anyone affected by dementia – wherever they are, whatever they're going through..."

If you would like to help the family, you can donate to Becky's Just Giving page at www.justgiving.com/fundraising/mw250123?utm_id=25.

Highpoint worst prison in the area for increasing sentences

JASMINE WATKISS

@Jasmine_Watkiss

MORE than 9,000 extra days of imprisonment were imposed on rule-breaking prisoners in Cambridgeshire and Suffolk last year.

Prisoners at Highpoint in Suffolk, and Whitemoor and Littlehey in Cambridgeshire, were handed a total of 9,497 days – more than 26 years – of additional imprisonment for breaking prison rules in 2016.

National charity the Howard League for Penal Reform says prisons are increasingly resorting to “draconian punishments”, such as extending prison stays, in an attempt to regain control – even over minor infractions such as disrespect or disobedience.

Highpoint prison near Haverhill, is the worst in the area when it comes to tacking extra days on to sentences as a form of punishment.

Last year, a staggering 8,066 days were handed out, across an average prison population of 1,299 inmates in 2016. This compares to 5,790 days in 2015.

At Whitemoor prison in March,

EXTRA PUNISHMENT:
Highpoint Prison

Cambridgeshire, which had an average of 439 prisoners last year, 947 extra days were imposed in 2016, compared to just 107 in 2015.

Littlehey prison, near Huntingdon, with an average prison population of 1,215, is the only one in the area where the additional days imposed has decreased – from 512 days in 2015 to 484 in 2016.

Howard League released the research on Monday, showing that almost 290,000 additional days of imprisonment were handed to prisoners across England and Wales during 2016 – costing the taxpayer about £27 million.

This amounts to a 75 per cent rise in only two years, and the charity says jails have been brought to breaking point by overcrowding and staff shortages.

The findings reveal how disciplinary hearings, known as adjudications, are over-used and used inappropriately, with even minor infractions such as disobedience and disrespect being punished with additional days of imprisonment.

The charity says additional days of imprisonment are imposed arbitrarily in England and Wales, and the severity of punishment varies from prison to prison, creating a sense of unfairness and injustice.

The report calls on England and Wales to follow the example set by Scotland, where the use of additional days of imprisonment was scrapped about 10 years ago.

Officials and governors in Scotland could find no evidence that abolishing the use of additional days had a negative impact on behaviour, and Scottish prisons have become safer since the change was made.

Frances Crook, chief executive of the Howard League for Penal Reform, said: “Prisons are out of control. More people than ever before are losing their lives to suicide, and violence and self-injury are at record levels.

“It is surely time to follow the example set in Scotland, where scrapping additional days’ imprisonment has made prisons fairer and safer. There are more constructive ways to deal with misbehaviour than simply locking up people for longer, which puts even more pressure on the system.”

A Ministry of Justice Prison Service spokesperson said: “The prison discipline system upholds justice in prisons, ensures actions have consequences and empowers governors to make the right judgements for their circumstances and their prisons.”

The findings are published in Howard League for Penal Reform’s report Out of control: Punishment in prison.

ROAD CLOSED: Still from a video taken by local resident Les Redhead at the scene of the incident on the A1307 near Horseheath on August 30

Woman, 48, dies after car crash on the A1307

The passenger in the vehicle, a man, was not injured. The road was closed in both directions for about six hours.

In a statement, Mrs Hamidi's family said: "She was a much loved daughter, mother and sister and will be greatly missed."

The road was closed in both directions for about six hours, blocking access from Haverhill to Cambridge.

Police are now appealing for witnesses to the incident.

Police were still on the scene at 9.45pm. The road remained closed until 1am and a diversion route was put in place.

A witness from Haverhill, who did not want to be named, said of the accident: "Of course this bothers me. It's awful to keep hearing all of these stories about people

ANNA SAVVA

@AnnaSavvaCN

I know of from Haverhill and nearby villages being killed or injured in accidents on the A1307.

"I used to travel from Haverhill to Addenbrooke's nearly every day for work last year, and the amount of people that speed and dangerously overtake, especially on the dual carriageways, is sickening.

"At the time of the accident I was travelling back on the bus from Cambridge and we were in the standstill.

"We couldn't see the accident, but we could see the fire engines from a distance.

"The air ambulance flew over us, and a police car and an ambulance drove past to the scene."

Witness Les Redhead told the News: "I was waiting to pick someone up at 7pm on the bus from Linton, but she called to say the bus was going nowhere.

"She told me the air ambulance landed, as well as the fire service and ambulance.

"I've seen numerous police vehicles, and from where I am you can just see the back end of the accident.

"The police are turning vehicles around on the dual carriageway so I expect it's quite serious."

He added: "I think the council needs to be doing more to make the road safe."

Anyone who was in the area at the time and witnessed the collision, or the vehicle in the moments before the crash, should call PC Steve Andrews at the Road Policing Unit on 101, quoting incident 429 of August 30.

CRIME

Three arrested after teenager stabbed

A TEENAGER has been hospitalised following a stabbing near a community centre in Haverhill.

Emergency services were called to reports of a stabbing in a car park on the Clements Estate, near the Leiston Community Centre, in Haverhill on Monday night.

The attack happened at 10.15pm in the car park between Ixworth Road and Butley Court.

The 19-year-old man was stabbed in the arm and has suffered a potentially life-changing injury.

The victim was taken to Addenbrooke's for treatment.

A spokesman for Suffolk Police said: "Police were called shortly after the attack took place and subsequently arrested two teenagers at around 1.15am on Monday morning after attending an address in Butley Court."

A Suffolk Police spokesman added: "The two, a 19-year-old man and a 16-year-old boy who are both from the Wembley area of London, were arrested on suspicion of assault causing grievous bodily harm and also released on bail.

Anyone with information is asked to contact West CID at Bury St Edmunds Police Station on 101 quoting reference 58773/17, or Crimestoppers anonymously on 0800 555 111.

Looking out for modern slaves

RECENT headlines have raised awareness that modern slavery and human trafficking in the UK is much more prevalent than previously thought.

It's important to remember that traffickers do not care how young their victims are and that trafficked children are some of the most vulnerable children in this country. They are often moved away from their family and friends, only to be exploited for someone else's gain.

Barnardo's has provided support to children of all ages who have been trafficked. They might have been sexually abused, used as cheap labour or domestic servants, or have been forced to commit crimes.

It's vital that professionals can spot the signs of trafficking and keep children safe. And we would echo the National Crime Agency and ask that members of the public look out for signs of slavery including visible injuries, a distressed appearance and any indication someone is being controlled by another person.

A Subway link is essential

THE debate rages on of how to achieve a mass transit solution in Cambridge.

Yet as we continue to see resistance to building a subway, I have to wonder what is motivating these individuals to fight? Do they have stock in bus companies? Paranoid their properties will devalue? Obsession for biking? Do they just suffer from severe megalomania to a point, their way is incontrovertibly perfect?

To be crystal clear, biking in this city is like playing Russian roulette. Too many cars, too many obstacles, too many people. Its not about if you get in an accident. It's just a matter of when. You cannot pay me to bike in this city.

Nor will I travel on a bus and subject myself to the horrors of being jammed together with the other sardines on a slow crawl through this city.

A Cambridge Subway is not an option. It's the only option. Once you pay for it, it would be a self-sustaining, clean method of travel under the city, with little or no pollution, no chance of accidents and best yet, more cars can be added as needed. Look at how well London and other major cities work. And best news yet is that your usage will pay for real improvements in the city and not the bus companies shareholders.

Face it. Anything else except a subway will result in a slow death for Cambridge. Businesses must be able to thrive in order to prosper. That means bringing more people into the city in a sustainable fashion that can be easily expanded without destruction of the city itself. Bikes don't cut it. A monorail is impractical. Bus growth will result in eventual collapse of roadway infrastructure to the point, the city will become gridlocked with buses only.

Pay now or pay later. But a subway has to happen if this city has any chance of hitting the 22nd century as a living, breathing, thriving city! If you cannot see this, try opening your eyes to reality.

Stopping road deaths

PRINCESS Diana: the People's Princess, and the most photographed woman in the world, a smile like no other, on a planet like no other.

And, from aids to landmines, she's saved millions of lives.

She's also a road crash victim, and since her death, more than 25 million men, women, and children have been killed in road crashes. Not to mention deaths from exhaust fumes.

Given man's ingenuity, the US has approved a treatment which redesigns a patient's immune system to attack cancer.

Also, in the new Forth road bridge, the UK has "the best bridge in the world."

Furthermore, a hand held device has been designed to detect concussion from saliva. It can be used in boxing, rugby, in the playground, on the battlefield, and indeed in the "war on our roads".

If it makes sense, to use handheld devices to detect concussion in children and cyclists who've been hit by motor vehicles, it would be nothing short of insane not to use speed limiters to stop drivers breaking speed limits – prevention is better than cure.

With speed limiters, we'd still have Diana, and William and Harry would still have a mother.

If we can have a target date to end the production of petrol fuelled cars, to save the planet, given that it's over 100 hundred years since the death of pedestrian Bridget Driscoll in 1896 – the UK's first road crash victim.

Why haven't we got a target date for ending road death?

In car dependency – we buy more than we need, eat more than we need, put on more weight than the body and the NHS can manage, and create more pollution and trash than the planet can cope with.

Sadly, we can't survive without cars, but we can survive without speeding drivers.

Not to, is surely speeding to Carmageddon.

Road option beats busway

HOW many more objections to a new concrete busway across precious countryside do the Greater Cambridge Partnership need before they will listen?

Mayor James Palmer says "The busway must not happen". Heidi Allen MP says no and she will "lie down in front of the bulldozers" if necessary.

The march through Cambridge reflects local public opinion by people who understand the traffic problems and have put forward a sensible, cheaper and less destructive alternative.

The Local Liason Forum's on-Road option is the answer, together with an all-ways junction at the Girton Interchange.

Removing the vehicles needing to turn south on to the M11 away from Madingley Road removes the congestion and then buses from Cambourne etc can move rapidly in and out of Cambridge down the A428.

No need to waste millions of pounds and build another bridge over the M11.

Brexit fears coming true

IN the New Year I waged a solitary campaign against the government Invoking Article 50 to terminate this country's membership of the EU.

Things are working out just as I feared.

By invoking Article 50 we handed over the initiative to the European Commission which laid down the agenda for the talks now taking place.

Unless one side or the other makes significant concessions we are heading for a "Hard Brexit" with all that it entails. The British people by a majority voted to leave the EU but did so without heeding the consequences.

Indeed, irresponsible people in high places misrepresented the issues and are still exerting their malign influence.

It is high time for a reality check.

We must pay our dues and get the best deal which we can negotiate, even if this will result in our having a semi-detached relationship with the EU which will fall far short of the membership of the Single Market which we now enjoy. This is not the time for recrimination.

'Thanks for saving my husband's life'

THE wife of a man who was brought back to life by fellow golfers after he suffered a massive heart attack on the course has said she can never thank them enough.

Mick Carter had gone for a game of golf with his son-in-law when he suffered a near-fatal heart attack at Haverhill golf club on Saturday, August 19.

Garry Kerr was playing golf with his son when the drama unfolded, and immediately sprung into action, starting to give CPR while seven-year-old junior golfing champion Ellis – ignoring his dad's instruction to stay put – sprinted to the club house for help.

Mr Carter's wife Ann has now spoken of her gratitude.

Mrs Carter said: "It's impossible to find a way to thank him."

"Thanks to Garry, Mick is still here to tell the tale."

"He just literally keeled over flat on his face. My son-in-law realised in a panic that he wasn't breathing. He shouted for help."

Mr Kerr and son Ellis had met Mr Carter only moments before, when his playing partner had hit an errant ball in their direction.

RACHAEL McMENEMY
@rach_mc94CN

As others scrambled to call for help, Mr Kerr was focused on the sole task of keeping Mr Carter alive.

Mr Kerr said: "It must have gone on for about 20 minutes.

"Occasionally, he would take a couple of breaths and I would stop, but then he just stopped breathing again. He'd fallen head first, so his nose and mouth were bleeding.

"Even when the paramedic got there, I had to keep doing CPR while he got the defibrillator out."

Mick was taken to Papworth Hospital in an air ambulance and is now waiting for a bypass operation next week.

Mrs Carter added: "Garry did an absolutely outstanding job, and his son – he's only seven – went to get help too. It was so brave of him.

"Garry just persevered and got him breathing again, so we could never thank him enough. It's something that we can never repay, and we're forever grateful to him.

"We're all just trying to come to terms with it. We have all just been in shock. We're just hoping the operation is successful."

Desperate to say thank you, Mrs Carter got in touch with the golf club to get Mr Kerr's phone number.

Mrs Carter said: "We wanted to thank him for the amazing thing he did. Mick has said he would like to meet Garry and Ellis when he is better."

Mr Carter, 68, doesn't remember anything from the event after beginning to fall to the ground. According to his wife, the heart attack was a complete shock.

The only heart issue Mr Carter had previously was the placement of a stent 15 years ago, but he has had no problems since then.

The Carters hope to meet up with the Kerrs after Mr Carter recovers from his bypass surgery.

Mr Kerr, who is a regular visitor to the golf course with his son, said the life-saving encounter was fate.

He added: "I mean, if the guy he was with hadn't hit such a wayward tee shot, then there wouldn't have been anyone near him when it happened."

Mum to retrace Corrie's final steps

THE mother of missing Corrie McKeague is inviting people to retrace his last known steps with her a year on from his disappearance.

Mystery still surrounds the sudden disappearance of the 23-year-old who went missing after a night out with friends in Bury St Edmunds on September 23, 2016.

One year on, on Sunday September 24, Nicola Urquhart hopes that walking the route with the public will help jog people's memory of the night.

Writing on the Find Corrie facebook page, she wrote: "Myself, Makeyan, Darroch and Tony (Corrie's two brothers and one of his uncles) will be on Langton Place, Bury St Edmunds (near So Bar, which is where Corrie started his night out) throughout the day/evening, where we will be happy to walk you along the route that Corrie took that night ending at the horseshoe area, while explaining all the facts that we have to date.

"Now is not the time to give up and sit quietly somewhere to remember Corrie. Information is what will find Corrie, we desperately need you for this.

"We welcome any opportunity to say hello and say thank you to any of you that would like to come and meet us, but most importantly we want to do something constructive that helps find Corrie."

Suffolk Police believe Corrie fell asleep in a bin and was taken in a lorry to Milton Landfill Site, but on July 21 the force announced they would no longer continue the search after 20 weeks with no results.

Nicola added: "This is being done in the hope that we may jog someone's memory that may have been out that night or has heard something since, or that after seeing the route and hearing the facts, may ask a question we have not thought of yet.

"We hope to see you then."

HOPE: Nicola Urquhart

Free NHS IVF treatment scrapped

FREE IVF treatment on the NHS in Cambridgeshire has been scrapped – despite 82 per cent of survey respondents disagreeing with the move and thousands signing a petition opposing it.

Instead of getting the first cycle of IVF free through the NHS, hopeful parents will have to pay for each cycle, according to the Cambridgeshire and Peterborough Clinical Commissioning Group (CCG).

The CCG decided to cut funding for specialist fertility treatment to save

ANNA STARNES

@CambridgeNewsUK

£700,000, helping ease its current financial concerns.

Cambridgeshire is now one of only five regions not to offer any NHS-funded specialty fertility treatment.

Infertility, which is categorised as a disease by the World Health Organisation, affects one in six people.

Berencine Smith, who underwent six unsuccessful IVF treatments, said it was incredibly disappointing that affordable fertility treatment came down to a "postcode lottery".

She said: "It is incredibly sad that people [who want to conceive] have to make these appalling choices."

A previous online survey found that 82 per cent of people did not agree with the plans to cut funding.

A 2,278 signature petition opposing the proposals was also submitted by Stuart Tuckwood, a representative of UNISON Acute Hospitals.

Ms Smith said the overwhelming public support to keep the fertility treatment funding made the decision undemocratic.

She said: "It is not really very democratic in my opinion. No-one should have to pay to have a child if they can't, because at the end of the day infertility is an illness. It's not self-inflicted."

Ms Smith added that fertility treatment should be part of the NHS care package that taxpayers already fund.

She said most people she has come across trying to conceive are incredibly healthy people and no strain to the health care system.

"Everyone I've spoken to is healthier than most people because they have tried everything they can to have a child. Certainly, when I went through it you're not overweight, you don't drink and you don't smoke. You go through all of these hoops to try and do something everyone else can, and then you've got the added stress now to find the money to do something like that."

NHS doctors will still provide IVF treatment in Cambridgeshire, but hopeful parents will have to pay for the treatment.

WEATHER

Icelandic vortex of rain and winds heading to the UK

UNSETTLED weather heading south from Iceland is due to bring a damp and windy week to the UK.

A vortex of heavy rains and strong winds will spread across the country, with temperatures plunging below average from Saturday.

Dr Claire Kennedy-Edwards, senior meteorologist of The Weather Channel, said a low pressure system will move south from Iceland into northern areas of Britain on Thursday.

It will then gradually move into England and Wales on Friday, with Saturday and Sunday remaining cool with plenty of rain.

She said: "It will feel like autumn has arrived the end of this week and over the weekend as a series of low pressure systems move in from the Atlantic.

"These will bring some wet and windy conditions to all areas.

"Temperatures will be a few degrees below the normal for early September, reaching 16-17 degrees celsius at best in the south over the weekend.

"Strong westerly winds will also be a feature and will make it feel even colder."

North England and the Midlands are set to face the worst of the miserable weekend weather, where thunderstorms and torrential downpours may lead to flooding.

Temperatures could plummet as low as 11 degrees Celsius in parts of Scotland, as the rest of Britain cools down with highs of just 16 degrees.

Dr Kennedy-Edwards added: "Conditions remain very unstable on Saturday with a risk of some thundery downpours across central and eastern regions of the UK in the afternoon."

Winds reaching speed of 40 mph are also expected to batter the west and south-west of the UK through Sunday evening and overnight into Monday, with gale or storm force gales possible.

"On Sunday there is a potential for some damaging winds over Ireland as well as south western and southern regions of England," added Dr Kennedy-Edwards.

Forecasters have warned the blustery winds and prolonged periods of heavy rain over the weekend are expected to continue for large part of next week.

Tokyo's futuristic cityscape

A tale of two cities

ALEX HIBBERT finds an oasis of calm in the midst of the hustle and bustle of Japan's busiest destinations

AFTER travelling around one of the most exotic places you've ever been, it's unusual the memories which shine brightest are of a resort that was home for only a handful of nights.

But after two weeks spent trekking across Japan, my time spent at the Hoshinoya resorts in two of its major cities - Tokyo and Kyoto - is still burning vividly in my brain.

Superlative in every sense, a stay at the luxurious Hoshinoya properties allows travellers the chance to truly immerse themselves in the country's incredible culture.

First to Tokyo, alighting at the city's central station, I take the short walk past amassed skyscrapers to the Otemachi district. Here, amongst the neat crowds of suited businessmen and women, I pass through a doorway, and am immediately transported into another world.

Wood and the sweet smell of Japanese fauna greet me first, before a kimono-clad host with a warm smile approaches and immediately requests I hand over my shoes.

In a matter of seconds I have left the hustle and bustle of a city which is home to 35 million people, very far behind, and am sitting on the floor, shoeless, sipping warm Japanese tea. Hoshinoya Tokyo is a 'tower ryokan', a traditional-style hotel that offers guests tatami mat floors, décor brimming with bamboo and Japanese wood, and shoji paper sliding doors.

An oasis of calm amidst the chaos of the city outside, from the moment you step in, serenity descends. Yet, being based between Tokyo Station and the Imperial Palace, its location couldn't be more convenient for forays into the city.

Guests are given complimentary kimonos, which can be worn in their room and around the hotel. Each floor of the hotel has a Ochanoma lounge, which offers a space to relax, drink some tea and sample fresh local delicacies.

The hotel also organises daily activities, including traditional Japanese magic shows, deep breathing exercises to help you get a good night's sleep, and sake tasting. And after a long day spent exploring Tokyo, you can soak in the top floor hot spring bath while staring up at the night sky.

Days later, a little more ragged from my adventures in the Far East, I arrive in Kyoto.

First, there's a quick train journey eight kilometres west of the city centre to Arashiyama station.

From there it's a short walk to the Togetsukyo Bridge where, on a small jetty, kimono-clad staff with welcoming smiles usher me onto a glistening black water taxi.

■ Double rooms at the Hoshinoya properties in Tokyo and Kyoto, pictured, start from around £450 per night. For details visit hoshinoyoresorts.com

■ Double rooms at the five-star Capitol Tokyu Hotel start from around £180 per night. See the-capitol-tokyotokyu.hotel-rn.com

We cast off, sailing past waving Japanese boatmen punting long-boats through the clear water of the Katsura River, and leave the hubbub of Kyoto behind as we sail past the verdant green slopes of the surrounding mountainsides.

At the water's end, I alight on a small jetty, and am greeted by more friendly faces welcoming me to the Hoshinoya Kyoto's extensive grounds, its paths lined with cedars and cherry blossoms. There's a salon and bar which serves coffee and teas by day, and an extensive whiskey list at night; there's a water garden (and a hidden one); there's a library and lounge space, and a floating tearoom where guests can relax and enjoy the beautiful river scenery.

Rooms and suites are cosy and clean, with luxurious beds and views out onto the river or into the woods around the resort.

Wherever you are in the property you feel close to nature, a feeling that taps into Kyoto's position nestled in amongst the mountains.

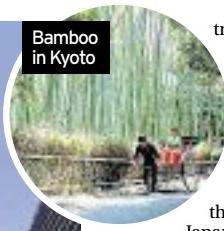

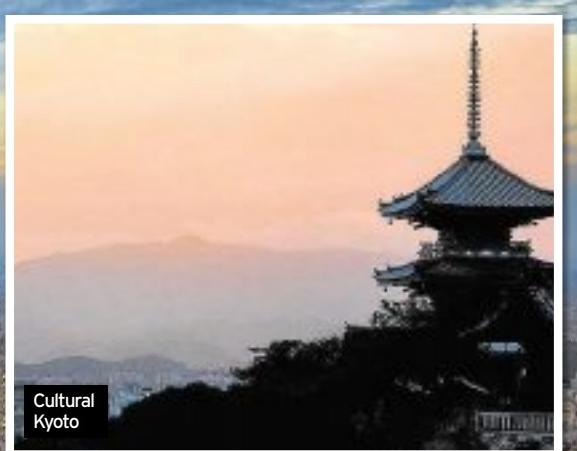

In Kyoto, guests are offered the chance to take part in daily activities, such as tea drinking sessions and a traditional incense burning ceremony.

Both resorts offer superlative dining options, using traditional Japanese ingredients and dishes updated with modern cooking techniques.

In Tokyo, award-winning executive chef Noriyuki Hamada's Nippon cuisine uses French techniques to produce complex and rewarding dishes with Japanese ingredients and seasoning. Focusing on fish and vegetables, dishes such as 'Out of the Blue' and 'Five Flavours of Delight' - five small canapés all served at different temperatures - take diners on a taste journey from sour to umami.

Dinner in Kyoto comes in a travellers the chance to dive into the futuristic cityscapes and that have come to symbolise Japan's place at the forefront of technological advances.

Kyoto, meanwhile, is the cultural capital of Japan – a city swarming with awe-inspiring sights, shrines and temples, where lucky visitors might glimpse a dainty Geisha being escorted across town in rickshaws. It's where Japan's fascinating history comes alive.

But both cities can actually be exhausting in their own ways – it's easy to feel in need of refuge after a day spent wandering the sense-assaulting streets of Shibuya in Tokyo, where huge billboards and sound systems outside shops battle to bring in customers, and Kyoto's streets and sights swarm with fellow tourists.

This is where each of the city's Hoshinoya resorts comes into its own, offering the perfect escape from the hustle and bustle of the hectic cities that they're based.

That's why, when I journey back into the many amazing memories made during my time in a country that's truly unlike any other, I know many of the moments burning brightly into life will spell out Hoshinoya.

procession of dazzling, tapas-like courses, 'kaiseki-style', from head chef Ichiro Kubota. He once worked at Umu, in London's Mayfair, and his pedigree shines through. Each course delivers on flavour, taking inspiration from everything from French cuisine to the Samurai leader who once lived on the site.

It's difficult to plan a trip to Japan and not include either Tokyo or Kyoto (or both) in your plans. Both cities have become the country's most popular tourist destinations for good reason. Tokyo, the capital, offers

Stay With Me and you won't go Wrong

It is time to release those tartan trousers from the suitcase in the attic, and maybe treat yourself to some blonde, spiky highlights as we go back to the seventies on Friday 8 September with a gig from Wrong Stewart and the Farcers. Gravely voiced Graham Buxton performs classics by Rod Stewart including Maggie May, Handbags and Gladrags, Hot Legs and Stay With Me.

There's a change of tempo with Stephen Smyth on Sunday. Stephen, who used to perform with the show band, The Indians as well as Dominic Kirwan, is now regarded as one of Ireland's most versatile entertainers. Join him for some old favourites at 7.30pm.

Carole King is one of the most successful songwriters not just of her generation, but ever. No, exaggeration! On Thursday, September 14, The Australian singer Niki Dee performs songs from Carole's album Tapestry, which topped the US album chart.

She also sings songs that you definitely know but maybe didn't know that Carole had written, songs like: Something Tells Me I'm Into Something Good, The Locomotion and (You Make Me Feel Like) A Natural Woman. Catch Carole King's Tapestry in Concert at 7.30pm.

If you are an opera fancier, then our live broadcast of The Royal Opera's The Magic Flute should make you happy. This spell-binding production of Mozart's work tells the story of Prince Tamino who is instructed to rescue the Queen's daughter, Pamina, and instead of your standard hero type weaponry is given, by the Queen's servants, a magic flute to ward off evil. All is not black and white in the world of Tamino and Pamina though, and the twisty plot turns keep loves young dream apart for too long. See it on Wednesday, September 20 at 7.15pm

The much admired Dunkirk is playing at the Arts Centre on Wednesday, September 13 (and again on the 25). Christopher Nolan's film charts the evacuation of more than 330,000 Allied troops from the beaches of Dunkirk in 1940. The ensemble cast includes Fionn Whitehead, Cillian Murphy, Mark Rylance, Tom Hardy and, in a surprise move, Harry Styles of 1D fame. On Tuesday, September 12 Catherine Deneuve and Catherine Frot star as two diametrically opposed women who have to come to rely on each other. Aerodynamic boost for performance Volvos POLESTAR, the performance brand of Volvo Cars, has unveiled its 2018 S60 saloon and V60 estate models.

The new versions come complete with additional aerodynamic components made from lightweight carbon fibre material that increase downforce by 30 per cent.

A limited number of 1,500 vehicles will be built, with all cars receiving an individual number on the tread plate.

The new aerodynamic exterior package has been developed jointly by the engineers of Polestar and Cyan Racing, the motorsport partner of Polestar, with data derived from the World Touring Car Championship programme, where the team is involved in the title fight.

Enhancements include a new front splitter, side sills and a rear spoiler extension, all made in lightweight carbon fibre, increasing downforce.

With the new aerodynamics, the S60 Polestar is capable of 0 to 60 in 4.4 seconds. The V60 takes 0.1 seconds longer. Both have a top speed restricted to 155mph.

SPORTY: New S60/V60 range boasts extra colour option – ‘bursting blue metallic’

The new components increase grip and high-speed stability, providing a car with the duality of being used in everyday driving as well as providing the driver with further control and feedback.

Much of the kit was developed and tested during Polestar Cyan Racing's recently-revealed secret Nurburgring test, where a Polestar S60 claimed the record for the fastest four-door road legal car around the famous Nordschleife circuit.

Visual changes include high-gloss black Polestar diamond-cut wheels, carbon fibre door mirror casings and a new colour, bursting blue metallic. The interior has been updated with a new seat upholstery, blue contrast stitching and Polestar embroidery.

More than 250 parts have been changed, compared to the standard S60 and V60 models, including an adjustable Ohlins shock absorber system and six-piston Brembo brake callipers with 371mm discs.

As far as power goes, the Polestar models retain the four-cylinder, 367bhp Drive-E engine, with fuel consumption and emissions of 179g/km for the S60 and 186g/km for the slightly heavier estate. That equates to 36.6mpg for the saloon and 35.2 for the V90.

Jorgen Ronstad, vice-president product strategy and management at Polestar, said: “The models are the pinnacle of our road car programmes that we have been developing successfully since our first road car was launched in 2013.”

Prices for the cars have yet to be announced.

CONCEPT: New from Kia

Kia hints at how the new cee'd could look

KOREAN car maker Kia is continuing its move upmarket with a sleek new model it will reveal in concept form at the Frankfurt Motor Show in September.

The company says the design is a clue to the next-generation cee'd hatchback, which has become one of its top-selling models in Europe.

So far, only this teaser image has been released, but it shows a new direction for Kia's design team.

There is now a lot of European input in Kia, with the cee'd produced at the firm's factory in Slovakia alongside the Sportage SUV and Venga compact MPV, and the concept model has been styled at its design centre in Frankfurt, only a stone's throw from the exhibition centre where it will be revealed on September 12.

SPARKY: BMW's i3 best-selling hatchback

BMW revamps i3 range as electric sales go on rising

WITH sales of electric vehicles on the rise, BMW is revamping its i3 hatchback which has already become Britain's best-selling premium compact EV.

The model continues to be available in both pure battery and range extender set-ups and now includes LED headlights and upgraded satellite navigation as standard.

Prices start from £34,070 for the i3 EV and £37,220 for the range extender – which is fitted with a petrol engine for added mileage. The prices represent an increase of some £3,000.

BMW is also bolstering the range with the introduction of sportier i3s models costing from £36,975 and £40,125 respectively.

The newcomers will have their world premiere at the Frankfurt Motor Show this month and are due for release in November.

Since the i3 was launched four years ago, BMW has sold more than 8,000 in the UK and the market for EVs is on the rise, with sales bucking the current trend and increasing month-by-month.

The new i3 line up uses the same 33kWh power pack as before which gives the pure EV model a 0 to 60 acceleration of 7.3 seconds and a 'real world' range of around 125 miles on a single charge.

For the i3s BMW has tweaked the power output up from 170 horsepower to 184 without affecting the range.

That results in a livelier 0 to 60 time of 6.9 seconds and a top speed of 99mph, up from the 93mph of the standard i3.

The range extender versions – fitted with a 38bhp two-cylinder petrol engine in addition to the electric motor – are not quite as quick under acceleration but are capable of travelling more than 200 miles without refuelling.

As with all EVs the i3 is emission-free and the range extenders are rated at between 13 and 15g/km, which equates to a theoretical fuel figure of more than 400mpg.

Volkswagen unveils its new T-Roc compact SUV

THESE are the first images of the new Volkswagen T-Roc compact SUV which has just had its world premiere on the shores of Lake Como in Italy.

On sale in the UK in December, and likely to be priced from around £19,000, the T-Roc will be at the higher end of the booming market for crossover cars.

Alongside the SEAT Arona and the Skoda Karoq, it sees the Volkswagen Group mounting a major offensive to lure SUV buyers.

Looking very stylish and upmarket, the T-Roc will have wide appeal and is being aimed at younger buyers who want a car that stands out.

Bright paint jobs with two-tone finishes will be a characteristic of the new T-Roc and the car will be available in three different roof colours – black, brown and white.

Volkswagen chairman Dr Herbert Diess told the VIP audience at the T-Roc launch, at the Villa Erba in Cernobbio, that the new SUV was the first of a series of models which would see the entire VW range renewed by 2020.

The company's long-term plan included more electric vehicles on a new platform currently due for release by 2025.

"Volkswagen's mission is to bring the most innovative technology and exceptional quality at reasonable prices," said Dr Diess.

He said that the T-Roc would play a key role in the strategy to focus on more SUVs.

Inside, the T-Roc is right up to date with Volkswagen's One-Net app-based connectivity set up as well as full smartphone hook-ups.

On higher-specification models, the T-Roc is fitted with an eight-inch glass finish touchscreen and will be available with a 300-Watt, eight-channel Beats sound system.

Another high tech feature is VW's Active Info instrument panel with its multi-mode graphical display.

Interior finishes are also on trend and the car can be had with a variety of colour themes in the cockpit with brown, blue, orange, yellow and grey themes available.

Volkswagen will be offering the T-Roc in two distinct set-ups – one sporty, the other more comfort-oriented.

The sportier versions will include aluminium foot pedals, red brake callipers and dark-tint rear windows.

As VW's smallest SUV, the T-Roc is some 10 inches shorter than the ROCKING: VW's T-Roc is similar in size to the Golf and is built on the same platform, but is aimed at younger buyers who want a car which stands out from the crowd popular Tiguan and the car will be available with a variety of engines – three diesel and three petrol – plus the option of DSG semi-automatic transmissions and four-wheel-drive.

Measuring 13ft 8ins in length, the T-Roc is similar in size to the VW Golf, although wider and taller, creating a roomy cabin.

Luggage capacity ranges from 445 to 1,290 litres which makes the T-Roc very family friendly. Interior space for a compact SUV is also good, particularly in the back.

The T-Roc is based on the same platform as the Golf and produced at Volkswagen's Setubal factory where VW has built the Scirocco coupe and Sharan people mover.

Eight-goal thrashing sees Borough go out

HAVERHILL Borough crashed out of the FA Cup at the first qualifying round stage as Kings Langley scored eight at the New Croft without reply.

The Evo Stick Southern League Premier side play two levels above Borough, but for the first half an hour the match was well poised.

Charlie Holmes tested Langley goalkeeper Ross Hampton after just four minutes before Borough's best chance of the game arrived on the quarter hour. Ryan Weaver beat the King's Langley goalkeeper to a cross and the ball bounced down to Holmes but he was unable to get his shot on target.

The visitors from Hertfordshire never looked back from this let-off, and four goals in a 15-minute period before the break ended the game as a contest.

Kieran Turner finished off a good team move to open the scoring after 29 minutes, with Gareth Price breaking the off-side trap and adding a second two minutes later.

Mitchell Weiss added a third from a corner with minutes to go to the break and then Turner added a fourth with a beautifully curled shot deep into first-half injury time.

Price added his second just after the break, shooting under Kieran Petty in the Borough goal, before Weiss doubled his tally with a powerful finish from the edge of the box.

Steve Ward completed the scoring for the visitors with a quick-fire double, the second from the penalty spot.

Meanwhile, in the Thurlow Nunn League, two goals from Jordan Palmer and one from Rory Jebb secured a 3-1 win for Haverhill Rovers at FC Clacton.

Rovers were out of luck on Tuesday, though, as they failed to find the net and lost their Premier Division clash with visitors Histon, 2-0.

'Disappointing' show leaves team in fear of drop

Cricket

The Haverhill innings ended on 185 for 8 and what was considered to be a well-below-par score.

Halstead began their reply looking intent on finishing the game in quick time. Despite the loss of an early wicket it didn't halt their momentum.

A couple of half chances went begging for the away side but in the end Halstead comfortably reached the target in the 33rd over for the loss of just one wicket, with opener Chris Huntington remaining unbeaten on 123.

Skipper Dellar said: "We didn't score enough runs and were then unable to put the Halstead batsmen under any pressure.

"It was a disappointing performance and one we need to put behind us very quickly. If we can win our remaining two games we still have a very good chance of finishing the season on a high."

The clubs' second XIs met in Division Three and Haverhill turned the tables, emerging victorious by four wickets.

Skipper Liam Botten won the toss and elected to field. Two good opening spells from Botten and Andrew Argent kept the Halstead batsmen on a tight rein.

A change of bowling led to a flurry of wickets, the evergreen Martyn Wilkins (15-4-27-4) taking four valuable wickets while conceding less than two runs an over.

Halstead ended their innings on 131 for 9.

Haverhill started their reply in determined fashion and Botten (23) and Lee Phillips (27) gave the home side a good platform to go on and win the game.

However a flurry of wickets left Haverhill looking vulnerable at 88 for 5.

It was left to Sam Hartshorn to score an unbeaten 42 to steer the team to what was, in the end, a comfortable victory by four wickets.

Motorsport

Title hunter in need of sponsorship

SAM Tomlinson took another step towards claiming the rookie championship title in the Lotus Elise Trophy – but a lack of financial support is set to scupper his dream of racing in the final round of the series and going on to lift the trophy.

The Cambridge driver is making an urgent appeal for sponsorship so he can race at Norfolk track Snetterton, his 'home' circuit, in the championship finale.

APPEAL: Sam Tomlinson

"Sadly, due to finances I currently cannot compete in the last round on October 14 at my home circuit of Snetterton where I have always been strong so I will forfeit the rookie championship to Steve [Summers]."

Anyone interested in offering him their support can contact him at 07725 365566 or samtomo83@gmail.com

■ Haverhill driver Gary Paffett is in DTM action this weekend as the series heads to the Nurburgring.

Paffett will be hoping to build on an encouraging performance in his Mercedes-AMG C63.
